DIED WHILE ON WAY HERE

SALESMAN WORKING COUNTY BECAME ILL ON W. M. TRAIN.

Died After Train Left Porters and Body Carried to Destination

Point of Ticket.

J. Ellsworth Corkran, aged 31, of Williamsburg, Md., while enroute from Baltimore to Gettysburg Monday morning, died on the Western Maryland passenger train from what physicians believe to have been an attack of acute indigestion. He complained to members of the train crew that he was feeling ill. At Sinheim he left his seat and went to the water cooler for a drink. After the train passed Porters the brakeman passed the seat occupied by Corkran and saw that he was growing pale. A short while later M. J. Weber found that the man was dead. When train reached Hanover the body was placed in baggage car and carried to Gettysburg, the destination point of his ticket. From papers carried he was identified as a salesman for the Northwestern Yeast Company of Chicago, and had been sampling Adams county last week, being driven to country stores by Wm. E. Kapp, of Biglerville. When Corkran left last Friday he said to Kapp that he was going home over the week-end and would return on Monday. When train arrived at Gettysburg the body was examined by Dr. H. M. Hartman, the railroad's physician, and Coroner Dr. C. G. Crist, and they were of the opinion that death was caused by acute indigestion. The family of the dead man were notified by the railroad company officials at Gettysburg. Corkran, after spending Sunday at his home at Williamsburg, Md., went to Baltimore and Monday morning boarded the train at Union Station, Baltimore. The body was prepared for burial at the undertaking parlors of H. E. Bender & Son, Gettysburg, and was sent to Williamsburg, Md.

Drive for Chemical Engine.

The drive for funds for the chemical fire engine is scheduled to begin Aug. 21 and last ten days until Aug. 31. The people of the town are back of this movement as evidenced by the fact that before anyone had been asked for any contribution, $925 had been voluntarily subscribed, and on Tuesday of this week after only a few of the business houses had been seen the fund had reached $1,000. The committee in charge of drive, Roy P. Funkhouser and J. E. Snyder, of the Town Council; I. L. Williams, Esq., and John Brohm, of the Chamber of Commerce, and J. B. Aumen and D. C. BUMPER CROPS IN SIGHT.

Some of the Crops Are Largest Ever Grown.

Bumper crop production is general this year, resulting from highly favorable growing conditions during July is indicated by the Government's August crop report.

A three-billion-bushel corn crop for the fourth time in the history of farming in the United States was forecast.

The Pennsylvania crop is estimated at 62 per cent of normal with a production of 70,901,000 bushels, about five million bushels short of last year. The Pennsylvania estimate of the winter wheat crop was 25,475,000 bushels, a million and a half bushels more than the average of the last ten years.

A record crop of hay, estimated at 93,100,000 tons, is being harvested, surpassing the record by 1,300,000 tons made in 1919.

Pennsylvania's contribution is a hay crop of 4,622,000 tons, a million tons more than last year.

The second largest crop of white potatoes ever grown was reported in prospect, the total production being forecast at 40,000,000 bushels, only 2,000,000 bushels less than the record crop of 1917.

Pennsylvania expects to furnish 25,721,000 bushels of this total, more than the average for the past ten years.

The fourth largest crop of tobacco ever grown is forecast, with a total production of 1,425,000,000 pounds.

Another 200,000,000 bushel crop of apples, the eleventh in thirty-three years, is indicated, with this year's production more than double that of last year.

Pennsylvania's contribution is estimated at 1,216,000 barrels while the average production for the past three years has been 82,000 barrels.

The crops throughout the country and in Pennsylvania are expected to be among the largest ever harvested, and crops are so far advanced that the estimates are given in a highly optimistic way.

PROTEST VOTE.

A political observer recently reported the frequency with which he heard of this life long Republican and that life long Republican, who were going to vote against any candidate of that party, and declared: "It is going to be a protest vote. The feeling against the Harding Administration and a Republican Congress for failing to get the country on its feet after two years of muddling is extremely bitter, especially among business men of the smaller type. Unemployment, industrial paralysis, President Harding's pitiful exhibition in connection with the coal and railroad strike, the impending tariff—all these are counts in the indictment against the Republicans. "The alienness with which the women have grasped the significance of the proposed tariff and the certainty that it will send the family expenses soaring is really astonishing. They are going to keep the family pocketbook in mind when they enter the polling places in November and they are prepared to do their share in driving the Republicans from power in the nation. So much for the resentment caused by the stupid performances at Washington."

FARM TOPICS

Poultry Culling.

The hundred and seventy-five Adams county poultry raisers learned how to make fewer hens pay bigger returns as a result of the eleven culling demonstrations held by the Adams County Farm Bureau in different sections of the county last week. Assistant County Agent S. B. Shenk in arranging for these meetings, secured the services of P. L. Sanford, county specialist of Penna. State College, who discussed the principles of culling, and gave each person present an opportunity to put the principles into actual practice. With an understanding of the characteristics that are indicative of a good layer, many of these who attended the meetings continued the culling practice on their own flocks after the demonstration.

The value of culling, according to Mr. P. L. Sanford lies in the fact that the few hens who remain, when they lay, will produce a greater percentage of eggs than the average flock. The eggs which are wasted are those which are laid by the hens which are not laying. By culling out the non-layers, the farmer is able to produce a greater percentage of eggs than the average flock. The value of culling, according to Mr. P. L. Sanford lies in the fact that the few hens who remain, when they lay, will produce a greater percentage of eggs than the average flock. Facts on Swine Industry in Penna.

Pennsylvania produces about one pig to every nine people, or in other words, about a million hogs a year. There are kept for breeding purposes, approximately 143,000 brood sows and 100,000 boars, on some 72,000 farms in the State. From this it is plain that the average of these farms has but two brood sows. There is a boar, on the average, for every 72 sows, whereas there should be, for the best economy, one to every 30 or 40 sows.

whole, there are about 12 brood sows to every boar, almost double the ratio for Pennsylvania. Of the hogs in this State, only 20 per cent are pure bred. From the most authentic reports it is learned that 43 per cent of the boars in the State are pure bred, which means that only a small percentage of the females are bred.

The Federal Government has recently published figures gathered from a large number of tests which show that pure breeds are 38 per cent more efficient than scrub hogs in producing pork. This can be taken as conclusive proof that the pure bred hog is an improved machine, more efficient than the scrub in producing pork. If Pennsylvania is to attain first place in the amount of pork produced, our swine breeders must of necessity turn to the pure bred.

Adams county produces one hog for almost every person or about 32,000 hogs a year. There are kept approximately 3200 brood sows and 520 boars on some 3450 farms. According to these figures the average of the farms in Adams county has but one brood sow and there is a boar on the average for every six sows, whereas, there should be for the greatest economy one to every 30 or 40. This shows that we have in Adams county a surplus of approximately 400 boars, for which no returns are received for the feed.

Country Homes in the Pigeon Hills.

A native of Adams county writes to the Compiler comparing the development of country life on Long Island as showing what may be done in our own native hills and says:

I am a native of Adams county, ardently interested in its affairs and the welfare of its good people, especially the rising generations. This summer my lot has been cast along the south shore of Long Island, a locality with which the people of Adams county are not familiar, but with which, from force of circumstances, many of them will soon have business transactions.

Now I would refer the reader to the school map of Long Island, which will probably be found as part of New York State. This island is large enough and old enough and long enough to warrant the publisher of school atlases in giving it a page by itself. It lies along the coast of the Atlantic Ocean extending one hundred miles from west to east, and being in width from nine to twenty-one miles. It is separated from New York proper and Connecticut by Long Island Sound from one to twenty-five miles in width. The immense borough of Brooklyn occupies the west end with a population of two and one-quarter millions, struggling for escape as ardently as were the tribes of Gaul in their efforts 2000 years ago, described in Caesar's Commentaries. They are being crowded to death in tenements, which they describe as apartments, but which afford little space for life, liberty or happiness.

East of the limits of New York City on Long Island lie only the counties of Nassau and Suffolk—the counties of Kings and Queens being counted as boroughs in making up the city of Greater New York, which also includes New York county, or the island of Manhattan, Bronx county (a portion taken from Westchester county) and Staten Island, or Richmond county.

It is not so many years since the development of Long Island began. I remember when the announcement was made one Monday morning that Alexander J. Stewart, a New York merchant, had purchased from the authorities of Queens county, a tract of land known as the Hempstead Plains, containing 3000 acres at the price of three dollars an acre. I had traveled over the plains before in the cars of the Long Island Railroad Company, and had observed that they were waste and arid, never having been cultivated. The railroad had been constructed in 1848, along the backbone or middle of the island to Riverhead and Greenport on the north side, and to Sag Harbor, an old whaling station, on the south-east end, but the interior of the island was then practically unexplored and unappreciated. Later a railroad was constructed along the south side, 30 miles to Babylon by 1870, and since then continued the full length of the island to Sag Harbor and another along the north shore to accommodate the people in many villages along the shores. Even the interior of the island in the eastern counties is scarcely more known and appreciated than are the Pigeon Hills in our county, which must soon have their awakening.

And now, having called attention to Long Island on the map, about which I desire to give more information, I will suspend, and say a few words about the Pigeon Hills, which to many of the school children of Adams county are as remote and unknown as if they were hundreds of miles away.

A pleasant piece of news comes from Hanover announcing that the local Country Club has purchased the 200-acre Seminary farm at the north-west angle of the Pigeon Hills along the Carlisle pike. This very interesting farm has a history worth detailing, and I commit the task to our old friend John T. Reily, or some other worthy historian.

The farm was first developed by a French refugee, who transferred possession to the Sulpician Seminary in Baltimore. About the year 1805, a religious colony of Trappists occupied the place throughout a very cold winter until they had arranged for transportation to the Ohio River and thence along to the neighborhood of Bardonia, Kentucky, where they have since continued their peculiar practices and devotions.

After the Trappists had departed, the farm was used for many years as a country club for the seminarians, and was greatly appreciated by hundreds of young men who, year after year, there spent their summer vacations. After many years, up to about 1870, the lawn and buildings were often used for picnic parties.

Another place almost as beautiful and historic along the Berlin and Hanover turnpike at the top of Hershey's Hill, is now adorned by bungalows belonging to wealthy Hanoverians.

A hundred other locations almost as beautiful and attractive for country homes may be found within the range of twelve miles in length and four miles in width occupied by these Pigeon Hills.

Summer Meeting of Teachers.

The twenty-second annual summer meeting of the teachers of the public schools of Adams county will be held in the Court House on Friday, Aug. 25. The sessions open at 10:00 o'clock in the morning. The program includes addresses by Dr. C. F. Sanders, of the faculty of Gettysburg College, and officials of the Department of Public Instruction of Pennsylvania.

County Superintendent W. Raymond Shank has announced that although attendance at these sessions on the part of the teachers of the county is entirely voluntary, it is expected all teachers will be present. Teachers have been requested to call at the office of the County Superintendent either before or after the meeting, to register, in order that a complete record of the attendance may be kept and credit given each one present. Mr. Shank also announced that at the close of the meeting school attendance registers may be had by the teachers as well as summary reports of the last year's work.

ARENDTSTVILLE.

Several days ago a large deer came into our town. Several boys gave it chase and it left for the mountains.

The time to sow turnip seed is here and the rain last Tuesday put the ground in good condition to sow it. At the festival held here last Saturday evening for the benefit of the cost for the addition built to the school house the gross amount was $180.47.

Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Spangler and their daughter Miss Beil, of Harrisburg, spent several days here recently with relatives.

Rev. Elmer E. Stockslager and three of his children, of Worthington, Pa., are visiting in the homes of Rev. D. T. Koser and Mrs. Henry Little.

Allen R. Trostle, of Chambersburg spent a day here last week with relatives and friends.

Mrs. Milton Jacobs has gone to Philadelphia to visit her son, Calvin, who has employment there.

Mrs. Dr. Stover, Miss Ruth Gezer, of Bendersville, and Mr. and Mrs. John Maring, of Gettysburg, were Sunday visitors in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lady.

Gored by Bull.

Arthur Leib, aged 45 years, a farmer of Reading township, near East Berlin, while watering a bull on Thursday evening of last week, was turned upon by the animal and gored. He was rendered unconscious by the attack and fell to the ground, where the bull with his hoofs pawed his body and head, severely lacerating and bruising him. His condition has not been regarded as serious. The accident occurred about 6:30 o'clock. Two children of Mr. Leib saw his plight and summoned aid. The bull was never before known to be dangerous. Dr. Eugene Elgin was summoned and gave surgical aid. However, Mr. Leib's condition was so weak that several stitches needed to close wounds in his face were not applied until Friday. Mr. Leib is also suffering from shock.

That Gasoline Tax.

The State of Pennsylvania has a tax of 1 cent a gallon on gasoline and the amount it received for the month of June was $265,864.20 and the receipts for the first six months of 1922 was over a million dollars.

In other words in June there was sold in the State 26,586,420 gallons of gasoline which at 27 cents per gallon cost $7,178,333.40 and for the six months there was a 100,000,000 gallons purchased at a cost of $27,000,000 dollars.

Of course a large part of this was used for trucks, busses and other commercial purposes, but by far the larger part of it was consumed by automobiles used for pleasure.

Attention Ladies!

The Republican Congress has voted a duty of from 74 1-2 per cent to 115 per cent on all woolen fabrics for dress goods. This tariff on woolen cloth valued at 80 cents a pound before its importation into this country will increase its cost to $160 a pound on its arrival on the American shore. In the case of a piece of dress goods valued (before importation) at 81 cents a pound the Republican tariff will raise the cost to $171 a pound.

Such dress goods are now paying, under the Democratic Underwood law, a duty of only 35 per cent ad valorem. That is to say the dress goods valued at 80 cents a pound now cost, with duty added, $1.08 a pound and 81-cent goods a trifle more.

A GOOD FRIEND.

A good friend stands by you when in need. Gettysburg people tell how Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test. Mrs. H. H. Ridinger of 247 W. Middle street, endorsed Doan's five years ago and again confirms the story. Could you ask for more convincing testimony?

"Besides giving fine benefits to one of my family, Doan's Kidney Pills have also been of great satisfaction to me," says Mrs. Ridinger. "I had a severe backache and weak kidneys and I don't believe any other medicine would give the fine results that Doan's Kidney Pills will for that trouble. At any rate Doan's Kidney Pills are the only kidney medicine that is used in our home and it never fails." (Statement given February 15, 1916).

On April 11, 1921, Mrs. Ridinger said: "I must say that Doan's Kidney Pills did the best kind of work for me in driving kidney complaint away and although it is no longer necessary for me to use Doan's, I believe in them as firmly as ever and I am glad to confirm my statement of 1916. Doan's are certainly a very fine medicine."

Packing Bundles for Mailing.

Many thousands of dollars in breakage would be saved annually if the instructions issued by the New York Post Office for sending packages through the parcel post were followed by individuals who have occasion to make shipments by express, freight, moving van or other conveyance. Most manufacturers and department stores have made a fine art of packing, but the ordinary person seems to think in many cases that a piece of paper tied around a package with a string is sufficient to carry it safely to any destination.

Double-faced corrugated paper is advised by the Post Office for most articles, especially those of the fragile variety. Professional shippers who have adopted this material for sending out their goods have devised many elaborate boxes in which several delicate articles may be placed in close contact and through padding be shipped in perfect safety in a small compact package. Many of these articles in the old days would have been delivered in packing cases filled with excelsior.

In preparing articles for the parcel post, the instructions suggest that the packer consider the necessity for making the package of sufficient strength to resist the pressure of other mail in the sack and to withstand the weight of the sacks that may be piled on it. Ordinary paste-board boxes are not recommended, though they may be used for light packages if well filled, wrapped carefully in several layers of strong heavy paper and tied securely with durable cord at both ends and center, with cords tied together where they cross.

Corrugated paper containers are recommended for clothing and cloth material, but such articles will be accepted if wrapped in several layers of strong paper and securely tied. Hats will not be accepted in ordinary boxes unless crated, but shoes may be sent if wrapped in strong paper, while umbrellas, canes and golf sticks must be protected by strips of wood. Corrugated paper is advised for cut flowers and candies, while stove castings and pieces of machinery must be protected by excelsior or other similar material. Sharp-pointed or edged instruments or tools must have their points thoroughly protected, and pastes and salves must be in water-tight containers.

Fragile articles, which should be marked so and packed with a liberal supply of excelsior or other cushioning material, include amber, cake, cameras, candies, candlesticks, chalk, china, cigars, combs, clocks, delicate mechanisms, dolls, drawings, fans, flowers, fountain pens, glass, hats, instruments of precision jewelry, maps, musical instruments, paintings, photographs and sensitive paper, films, pipes, plaster of paris articles, plumes, pottery, phonographs and records, test tubes, thermos bottles, toys, typewriters and watches.

Special regulations are provided for perishable matter. Such packages should be marked plainly "Perishable" and, if possible, sent special delivery. Berries and soft fruit, the department finds, while apparently solid and firm when offered for mailing, quickly ripens and become soft and when slightly crushed tend to liquify, causing the wrapper to break and cause other goods in the sack to be damaged. For this reason the department has ruled that such goods shall be packed in a container of sufficient strength to prevent their being crushed, and also of such a character that nothing can escape from the package. Articles likely to spoil within the time reasonably required for transportation and delivery will not be accepted for mailing.

Among the articles classed as unavailable by the parcel post are poisons, poisonous animals, corrosive material, fireworks, infernal machines, explosives of every kind, devices or compositions of any kind liable to cause fire by self-ignition, disease germs and any article exhalting a bad odor. Included in this list, of course, are any material or literature made or published in violation of any criminal laws.

One ruling affecting the liquor question allows the bringing into this country from foreign countries of newspapers with advertisements of liquors, but prohibits the sending of any advertisements or solicitation of orders for intoxicating liquor from points within the country.

$400,000 Bribe for Distillery Guard.

Some interesting facts and some very large figures were brought to light in the $500,000 "rum and water" conspiracy case on trial in the Federal Court, Philadelphia. Arthur Hamill, a former U. S. Customs guard, tells the Court of his part in the big whiskey robbery at the Hamill distillery near York several weeks ago. Hamill said he had been offered $400,000 to "go along."

The Government charges that the men entered into a scheme which promised a fortune. One of the defendants had a permit to export whiskey to the Greek Government. The plan, according to the government, was to withdraw 10,000 barrels of whiskey from off the whiskey and to place it in water, collect the government tax refund on liquor and then to export and ship the water and to sell the whiskey to bootleggers.

Hamill, almost an hour on the witness stand, related the ramifications of the plot as he knew them. He declared that when he went into the scheme he believed the plan was merely to substitute inferior whiskey for liquor of high proof, thus taking a fair and what he considered a reasonable legitimate profit on each barrel.

Hamill declared his profit was to have been $20 for each barrel. He said that his desire to possess a home of his own was dangled as a seductive bait before his eyes. He declared that one of his alleged co-conspirators had reminded him that at $20 a barrel, he would make $400,000 if the deal went through.

Hamill admitted that the temptation had been too much for him. At first he said he had resisted, had threatened even that he would tell the authorities. Then he reconsidered his refusal, and agreed to "go along."
